THE NEW WAVE

We've seen wild, wayward curls, cutesy little-girl curls, structured and sophisticated curls. But we've never seen them looking as glamorous and grown-up as they did at Versace's Autumn/Winter 99/00 show. 'Donatella talked to me before the show,' says hairdresser Orlando Pita, 'and we both decided we wanted a style that would make an impact - make the girls look more "done".' Pita worked the brief by pumping up the volume - dividing the models' hair into small sections, then tonging some bits, dreadlocking others and leaving the rest completely untouched. Was he pleased with the finished result? 'I think it looked really luxurious and sexy,' he says, 'and that's something we haven't seen for a while.' Too long, we say. Rosie Green
